LIST OF RELIGIOUS AND CHARITABLE INSTITUTIONS

IN WHICH LAUNDRIES

ARE CARRIED ON.

EXPLANATORY NOTE.

The List of Religious and Charitable Institutions in which laundries are carried on was originally prepared for Home Office use after the passing of the Factory and Workshop Act, 1901. It was compiled from Directories of Charitable and Religious Institutions, supplemented by such local information as was in the possession of the District Inspectors of Factories and Workshops, and information obtained from other sources. Additions have been made to the List from time to time as fresh places were brought to the knowledge of the Department, but in the absence of any power to call for information from such places, the Secretary of State is unable to say whether or not the List is complete. The following points should be noted:—

(1.) The List only purports to be a List of Institutions which take in laundry work from outside by way of trade or for purposes of gain. The names of a very large number of Institutions were received by the Home Office in which laundry work was done but not by way of trade or for purposes of gain. These were excluded from the List as falling outside the scope of the Factory and Workshop Act.

(2.) The Institutions named in Part I. of the List are those which have accepted inspection by the Factory Department in response to a circular letter issued by the Home Office in January, 1902,* or have since permitted a visit from one or more of the Lady Inspectors. The Institutions named in Part II. have either refused to accept inspection or in one or two cases gave no definite answer to the Home Office circular letter. Institutions (about 40 in number) who failed, after a reminder, to reply are not included, as it was not known whether they carried on laundry work for gain or not.

(3.) Column 5 of the List distinguishes between the Institutions according as they are attached to the Church of England, the Roman Catholic Church, or to other Religions or Charitable bodies. Care has been taken to make the information given in this column as accurate as possible, but the Home Office has no official means of verifying it. It has not been possible to distinguish conventual laundries from other laundries.

(4.) It is requested that attention may be drawn to any inaccuracies in this list.

* This circular was printed as an appendix to the Annual Report of the Chief Inspector of Factories for 1902, and is prefixed to the present List.

Circular Letter issued by the Home Office in January, 1902.

HOME OFFICE,

Whitehall, S.W.,

24th January, 1902.

GENTLEMEN,

It will be within your recollection that during the last Session of Parliament the question of the inspection of laundries connected with religious and charitable institutions by the Factory Inspectors in the same way as laundries carried on by way of business was the subject of considerable discussion both in the House of Commons and in the House of Lords. In the course of this discussion it was stated by the Bishop of Winchester and others connected with such institutions that the visits of a Factory Inspector and the help and advice he would be able to give would be welcomed at the institutions in which they are interested, provided suitable arrangements could be made to adapt such inspection to the real needs of the institutions. The Secretary of State is anxious to ascertain whether any considerable number of institutions would be willing to receive visits from the Factory Inspectors, and if so he is prepared to instruct the Inspectors to visit the institutions and give such advice and assistance as may be in their power. If so desired, the visits could be made by the Lady Inspectors on the Home Office staff, instead of the Inspector for the District.

The Secretary of State recognises that modifications would be required in the provisions of the Factory Act to adapt them to the circumstances of institutions of this kind; but considerable misconception seems to exist as to the real nature of these provisions.

The objects which Parliament has aimed at securing in laundries are chiefly—

1. Reasonable hours of work.
2. Healthy conditions of employment.
3. Prevention of accidents from machinery, &c.

It may perhaps help to remove some misconception if the Secretary of State mentions briefly some of the requirements of the Factory Act in these matters, as he thinks it will be apparent that these requirements are what every person interested in the welfare of the inmates of such institutions would wish to see carried out.

The maximum number of hours of employment which Parliament has considered to be reasonable are (a) for women, not more than 60 hours in any one week and not more than 14 hours in any one day; (b) for young persons under 18 years of age, not more than 60 hours in any one week and not more than 12 hours in any one day; and (c) for children under 14, not more than 30 hours in any one week and not more than 10 hours in any one day. It is compulsory to allow an interval of at least half an hour in every five hours, but intervals are not included in reckoning the hours of employment. The observance of these provisions is secured by requiring the hours of employment to be fixed beforehand, but considerable latitude in regard to the alteration of the hours in order to meet the varying requirements of laundry work is allowed by the Act.

For the purpose of securing healthy conditions of work in laundries, the Act requires the laundry to be kept in a cleanly state, sufficient means of ventilation to be provided, floors to be drained when liable to be much wetted, and 250 cubic feet of air space to be allowed for each person employed in any room, &c.

Safety is secured by requiring the provision of proper guards for dangerous parts of machinery, placing restrictions on the cleaning of moving machinery, requiring the provision of proper means of escape in case of fire, requiring notice to be given of any accidents so that their cause may be investigated if necessary, &c., &c. The experience of the Home Office shows that preventable accidents of a serious character are common, especially in steam laundries, owing to the nature of the appliances used, and that many can be obviated by suitable guards of a permanent kind, often at small cost.

On all these matters the Inspectors of the Factory Department are well qualified by their experience to assist and advise.

The Inspectors' duties are not confined merely to seeing whether regulations which have been laid down are actually carried out. Their visits are often of considerable value to those in charge of laundries by giving them opportunities of consultation with the Inspectors and of gathering from them suggestions of better arrangements and appliances based upon the wide experience of the Inspectors as to what has been found to be practicable and useful in similar circumstances elsewhere.

The Secretary of State thinks it will be generally recognised that the hours allowed by the Act are such as can hardly be exceeded without overtaxing the strength of the persons employed, and that the other requirements referred to do not go beyond what may reasonably be looked for in a well regulated laundry, irrespective of statutory obligation; and the visits of the Inspectors, if received, will give the managers and other persons interested in the institutions some guarantee that the conditions that they would wish to see are being actually observed.

The Secretary of State would be glad if you would let him know—

(1) Whether you would wish to receive visits from the Factory Inspectors.

(2) If so, whether you would wish the visit to be made by the Inspector for the district or by a Lady Factory Inspector.

I am, Gentlemen,

Your obedient Servant,

KENNEL E. DIGNY.

The Managers of the
